The McCain Institute for International Leadership seeks:
Humanitarian Action Intern

Based in Washington, The McCain Institute for International Leadership at Arizona State University offers outstanding internship opportunities for college students, graduate students and recent graduates. Students interested in advancing character driven leadership, playing a role in finding solutions to the world’s most pressing humanitarian issues, and working to effect change in both domestic and foreign policy are encouraged to apply.

The Humanitarian Action Intern will support the Institute’s Humanitarian Action program. Inspired by Mrs. Cindy McCain’s life-long championing of humanitarian causes, the Institute is focusing on ending human trafficking—starting in our own backyard in Arizona. This is an ideal position for someone interested in pursuing a career in government or in an NGO focused on humanitarian causes, human rights and/or international development.

Position Responsibilities:

- Research various issues regarding human trafficking;
- Represent the Institute at events, conferences, and seminars to learn about work being done in relevant areas;
- Attend hearings on or related to human trafficking and provide summaries for the Institute's principles;
- Help grow Institute network in human trafficking;
- Track media sources for relevant human trafficking related stories that will be sent out via the Institute’s various social media platforms; and
- Support the Human Trafficking Program Coordinator and perform other tasks as assigned.

Requirements:

- Responsible, mature, professional, and flexible;
- Ability to work independently and exercise excellent judgment; be a self-starter;
- Must be highly organized, able to balance multiple priorities, meet deadlines and work well in team-oriented environment;
- Excellent writing skills and attention to detail;
- Previous experience using social media platforms like Twitter, Instagram, YouTube, Facebook, etc.
- Previous human trafficking experience preferred, but not required; and
- A genuine passion for humanitarian causes.
